 kept me
 close to his heart, as the moon does its dark spots. But, however strong
 a ship may be, if it harbours a small hole in its bottom, it must sink.—
 That I would make you sink, Keman-
 kar, was in the law of nature.

Malini

You made him sink ?

Swpriya

Yes, I did, The day when the rebellion slunk away in shame before
 the light in your face and the music
 in the air that touched you, Kemankar
 alone was unmoved. He left me behind him, and said that he must go to the foreign land to bring soldiers,
 and uproot the new creed
 from the sacred soil of Kashi.—You know what followed. You made me live again
 in a new land of birth, "
